I passed my 5 wpm after a couple of weeks of practice and when I tried the same thing with 13 wpm I failed the code test badly. After I got over the shock I got on the air and started doing at least 2 CW QSOs a night. Now here's a new concept, doing CW on the air! What a shock that actually using it would make it one good at it! I also used Super Morse to help out too. In a month's time I was up to 17 wpm and passed my 13 wpm on the next try. However a couple of things happened after I got to this point. I enjoyed my CW contacts alot and it dawned on me that if I used CW after that point I should easily pass my Extra CW test not to much later. So I kept it up and passed my 20 wpm when I took my Advanced test. 2 weeks later I passed my Extra written test. It took me 1 year to go from Novice to Extra using this method. The secret is to GET ON THE AIR AND ACTUALLY USE CW! For some reason this seems to not be obvious to most people. That is what the Novice CW subbands are for. No one will laugh or make fun of you if you have a hard time with CW. I know because I really, really stunk when I first got on the air and no one was rude to me there! In fact that's where I had my first CW DX contact. So once again GET ON THE AIR AND USE IT!!!

>The written, on the other hand, was easy as pie.

Agreed!

73 and good luck!

Please! This is rec.radio.amateur.policy. If people want to discuss homosexuality, great, but there are better newsgroups. This thread is no longer related to radio...

If you folks want to hash out the subject, wonderful, but the entire intent of newsgroups is to segregate discussions on a topical basis.

Try alt.sex, or alt.motss, or alt.sex.wizards, or some other group.

How did you arrive at this ingenious conclusion, Dan?

I just returned from San Diego, California. On business trips I always bring along my 2 meter HT and talk to the local folks. On this trip I heard NO bad operating, even though this area of the country is reputed to be rampant with it.

In addition, I was highly impressed by the number of emergency nets and arson watch nets that were active until the wee hours of the morning when I could no longer keep my eyes (or ears) open.

Does this sound like the "lost cause" that you were referring to, Dan?

Interesting bit of news but what has this got to do with Amateur Radio?

The problem with this is that you are slowly eroding the incentive to upgrade as increasing the bandwidth makes the drive to move up a lot less.

Good point there.

Do you speak from personal experience here or is this just a rumor?

I guess we will have to include smokers, overweight and out of shape people in this class too!

I strongly object to the view that AIDS victims are somehow "authors of their own misfortune" and should simply be ignored on that basis. Not only does this view ignore the facts and the history of the disease, such a policy amounts to genocide as ugly as anything the Nazis dreamed up.

I would suggest you look to Africa where the disease started (about 10 years before a group of gay men in the US were infected). In several countries essentially every adult between puberty and 40 years old is infected. I know of no reason why this disease won't follow the same pattern in the US. According to the AIDS conferences that is exactly what is happening.

Treat AIDS as a disease not a cheap and confused morality statement.

Ed, you are so out of touch with what goes on on campuses today (or at least this campus); our campus police have to periodically conduct 'raids' in the restrooms and arrest these guys; no need to 'peep' - the activities are reported in the student newspaper. Strangers? Well, the walls contain messages such as 'looking for 18-20 year old Japanese - be here at 3:30 of Friday - tap your feet - I'll be in next stall'.

Trying to defend this behavior, Ed? There is no defense.

Anyone who knowingly continues to partake in a dangerous activity should not expect handouts, when the result of that activity becomes a burden on the rest of society. Call it bigotry if you like; I call it 'higher insurance premiums' for that person engaging in that activity.
